

Design for Safety in Construction 22nd run

(Virtual Classroom)

* Supported by UTAP

Revamped & Revised to
DfS Guidelines 2022

Introduction

The regulatory requirement for Design-for-Safety (DfS) was enforced since August 2016. It requires stakeholders to work together to address foreseeable design risks right from the conceptual design to the construction of the project. During the construction stage, the DfS review meetings will involve the design & supervision team from the Consultants and construction team from the Contractor. They will participate in reviewing safety and health risks relating to design or construction method, and propose mitigation measures for implementation.

IES Academy Virtual Classroom

Objectives

1. To know the duties of key stakeholders in the WSH (DfS) Regulations.
2. To understand the GUIDE review process as recommended in the WSH Guidelines (DfS) published on 24 Aug 2022, in particular the DfS review during construction stage.
3. To differentiate between Construction Risk Assessment Forms that are submitted by the Contractor and the Design Risk Assessment Forms prepared after the DfS review meetings.
4. To appreciate that construction safety can be enhanced by eliminating the risks upstream or implementing control measures identified during the DfS review process.
