IES Academy Virtual

Introduction

Structural steel is still in demand for their high quality and productivity while stainless steel and aluminium has appealing qualities leading to an increasing use in the Construction Industry. Construction stakeholders (Owners, Architects, Engineers, and Resident Technical Officers) are handling more demanding and complex projects in current development projects involving working with stainless steel & aluminium elements and protection of structural steel. This programme aims to provide information on the specification, manufacturing and maintenance of stainless steel & aluminium to participants to allow them to better execute their projects. It also shares concepts to corrosion protection for steel structures.

Objectives

Structural Steel:

Participants will have a better understanding on various corrosion methods on structural steel like hot dip galvanising, anti-corrosion paint & coating. Issues related to inspection, maintenance and repair of steel structures will also be discussed.

Stainless Steel:

Participants will have a better understand the production & fabrication process and the available types of finishes offered by stainless steel. They will also know the typical types of connections details as well as basic maintenance and cleaning of stainless steel elements.

Aluminium:

Participants will be introduced to the history and manufacture of aluminium and its alloys. The physical characteristics and common aluminium products and fabrication will also be discussed. Basic design concepts for structural use of aluminium including heat affected zone and fatigue will be shared with participants. The final portion of the programme explains the types of corrosion for such structures and the preventive measures.
